Farm info

When Luiz Paulo's grandfather died, his family inherited his coffee farms. Luiz Paulo's parents decided to honor and recognize the career and trajectory of this great grower, by giving their son a coffee farm called Sr. Niquinho, which was actually his grandfather's nickname.

When asked about the future, Luiz Paulo says: "For me, producing a sustainable coffee and having sustainability in mind is a vital part for any coffee grower, both nowadays and in the future. We must have the responsibility of producing with quality and on a consistent basis, and protecting the environment that surrounds us, as well as the society that we live in. By doing our work with these rules in mind, we will be able to offer exactly what our very demanding clients worldwide desire from a coffee supplier."

Located at an altitude of about 1,100 MASL and with an annual rainfall average between 1,250mm and 1,400mm, Sr. Niquinho farm has native forests, riparian woods around and water sources, which are fully preserved.

The coffees grown there are processed in the sister farm, named Irmas Pereira, due to closeness of the properties and the large processing capacity of this farm.
